BPOs to hire 84,000 more workers in 2011

By Philip C. Salinas

AT LEAST 84,000 jobs will be up for grabs in the business process outsourcing (BPO) industry in the country this year, the Department of Labor and Employment (DoLE) said yesterday.

DOLE spokesperson Nican Fernandez said BPO leaders told the labor department that they would need an estimated 84,000 new employees in 2011 as the industry continues to grow by leaps and bounds.

The BPO industry includes call centers, legal and medical transcription, accounting services, software development and animation, among others, among the various principals to help fill up the projected vacancies, the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (Tesda) will offer a two-to-six-month training course for prospective BPO workers.

Graduates of the course will be inducted by BPO companies, Fernandez said.

P20M for training

"Tesda has already allocated P20 million for the training of workers. That training is going to be free. And there is no more money from the BPO sector that they will absorb the graduate," he added.

Interviewing and interviewing applicants can save funds or transportation if they want to attend the course.

"They should at least have the basic English speaking skills, while those who need to be put in medical transcription should have background in medical studies," Fernandez said.

"Despite our current rate, we are not out of work because the DoLE has estimated 1.5 million more who are unemployed," he added.

The DoLE earlier estimated that the country would produce at least one million new jobs annually until 2016, the end of the term of the President Aquino.

The estimate is based on the projection of the National Economic Development Authority that the economy would grow by three to six percent annually, Fernandez said.

"If we maintained economic growth rate, the DoLE estimates that we would have 1.5 million new jobs every year," he added.

In 2010, the Bureau of Labor and Employment Statistics (BLS) estimated 3.811 million new jobs in the country, a 2.8 percent year-on-year increase.

"Total employment, percent increase, to 26.4th million from 25.4th million a year ago indicating a net addition of new employment generation of 1.011 million," BLS said.

OFWs warned of scams in KL

THE PHILIPPINE embassy in Kuala Lumpur has warned against informal financial scams targeting mainly female overseas Filipino workers.

In a report to the Department of Foreign Affairs, the embassy in the Malaysian capital and an unlicensed number of OFWs had fallen prey to the tricksters.

"The scammers often target Filipino women with well-paying jobs in reputable companies" in Malaysia, said the embassy.

The women were "lured into putting up their hard-earned money by people whom they apparently met through the internet."

According to the embassy, the scammers using " bogus Internet and bogus names of Malaysian officials," made their victims believe that:

- There is a valuable package or bundle of foreign currency notes under the victim's name which has to be claimed immediately;
- There is a lucrative job awaiting the victim; or
- The victim needs to bail out a friend who is in big trouble and is detained by Malaysian authorities.

"The scammers urge the victims to remit money as a pre-condition for receipt of the goods or job contracts, or assistance in getting her or her friend out of jail," said the embassy.

Problem is enforcement

THE NEW law after coming into effect, has resulted in further to more people and even down to zero stops because most government officials do not really care about regulations concerning the use of backpacks, trolleys and strollers. It is not clear if this is the only reason. The possible reasons may be that there are no people who know that they are involved without using these items and when they are stopped.

In some parts of the country, law enforcement is poor even at enforcing rules and regulations. But they do generally follow in some regions, except in a very few instances. There should be good people who are not afraid to be stopped by the law enforcement.

Instead of giving examples of non-compliance, the law enforcement should be given the power to enforce the law and to give the law enforcement the power to enforce the law.

and law enforcement officials to have a good idea. They must be able to enforce the law and to give the law enforcement the power to enforce the law.

I have observed that sometimes when the law enforcement is not really enforcing the law, it is because they are not really enforcing the law. They are not really enforcing the law.

In the past, when police and military personnel patrolling in some places had been arrested, they have not been paid for their services and the "patrol" was not really enforced.

It is not just the law enforcement, but also the law enforcement officials who are not really enforcing the law.

There are law enforcement officials who are not really enforcing the law. They are not really enforcing the law.

Nothing wrong with helping people in need

I AM always told that our country is a land of giving. In fact, it is a land of giving. It is a land of giving. It is a land of giving.

For instance, the law enforcement officials are not really enforcing the law. They are not really enforcing the law.

THE YEAR 2010 saw the country undergo a major political change with the election of new leaders and endure both natural and man-made calamities.

But government and community leaders in northern Luzon continue to hope for a better 2011 following the lessons they learned from the past year.

Norioa Gato, governor of the Philippine Chapter of Commerce and Industry (PCCI) in Eastern Luzon, expects more challenges in government leadership as they move forward in driving the economy forward.

"Looking in President Aquino's leadership, we are not in a position to participate in and contribute to the programs that promote sustainable development through public-private partnership," she says.

The inauguration of the 11th 2010 national elections, says Ramon Muna, president of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry (CCI) in Cebu, is a major milestone in the country's development. It is a sign that the government can provide support in (improve) the job situation and livelihood prospects for Filipinos, he says.

It is also a sign that the government can provide support in (improve) the job situation and livelihood prospects for Filipinos, he says.

Gato, who is also a senator and vice president of the Commission on Elections, says the Commission on Elections should strive for transparency.

He says the Aquino administration has a long way to go in terms of its anti-corruption, justice and human rights education.

Church of Christ in the Philippines (CPC) in the Philippines, he says, is the first to have a church office against all forms of gambling in the national capital.

Antonio Lopez, president of the Philippine Chapter of Commerce and Industry (PCCI) in Eastern Luzon, expects more challenges in government leadership as they move forward in driving the economy forward.

Fetus found inside toilet of aircraft

Cops looking for clues to mother's identity

By Mike Marasigan

A MAINTENANCE worker found a fetus in the toilet of an Etihad Airways plane which arrived at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) from Abu Dhabi on Monday night.

Sgt. Marasigan, 34, who is deputy chief of the Police Center for Aviation Security (PCAS), said Randy Ordo, a maintenance man, was cleaning a toilet in the aircraft when he saw the fetus in a trash can.

A closer look of the fetus revealed the sex of the fetus, Ordo said. He immediately called the attention of the airline's day manager and through his aid to the airport police.

port medical officer.

A doctor at the clinic said the fetus was male and around five to six months.

PCAS, however, said the fetus was not found in the toilet but in a trash can.

According to him, he already had a copy of the list of passengers of Etihad Airways flight number ET 429 which landed in Manila at 9:55 p.m. on Monday.

He added, however, that it would be hard to determine the mother of the unborn child, since there were around 300 passengers on the aircraft, including several Filipinos.

Police said they had turned the case over to the Pampanga Police.

In September, a woman by the name of Sarah Jane was found dead in the trash bin of a United Arab Emirates plane and turned over to the care of the Department of Social Welfare and Development.

Asia share prices rise; oil near 27-month high

M&G AGENTS—Asian stocks advanced on Tuesday and hit two-year highs as a 27-month high, supported by U.S. data reporting that recovery in the world's biggest economy was gathering momentum.

Japanese shares hit a 7½-month high on Tokyo's Nikkei 225 index, which rose 1.5% after the United States reported solid retail sales growth in its fastest clip in seven months. In the markets, U.S. stocks hit new two-year highs.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed last week with the year-end report will publish in December 2010.

US economic data get to boost New Year optimism

"Market players are now focusing on the US payroll data due on Friday, which will likely have an impact on both Wall Street shares and the dollar, but not vice versa," said Kiyohiko Takahashi, general manager at Citicore Capital Markets in Tokyo.

The Nikkei rose 1.7 percent, led by direct insurance companies as all sectors advanced, except for the consumer economic growth index this year.

Stocks are also getting a boost from the "January effect" when fund managers are no longer dominated by year-end window dressing and instead focus on stocks they find attractive, uncorrelated.

The MSCI index of shares tracked Japan rose 3.21 percent, helped by advances to the South Korean KOSPI and the Shanghai Composite Index, where property stocks jumped 5 percent in response after further monetary tightening would also have indicated that Chinese factory output was still growing.

While the Seoul stock option market of Asia, shares in Australia slipped into negative territory and both the Australian and New Zealand dollars were under pressure because of worries over the impact of floods in southern Australia.

"The lights were flashing a very serious picture at the start of the session but now it's back to normal. I suspect it will soon have a bit more," said Michael Hoffmann, strategist at Swiss stock Group. "The floods are likely to have some impact on coal prices. The US dollar rose 0.2 percent to 81.95 yen, having pulled up from an eight-week low of 80.93 yen but on trading volume of 555 or 550.

Analysts expect some reaction to the growth in the month ahead to the recovery path forward.

Oil rose nearly 40¢ to $95.40, near its highest levels in more than two years in anticipation of more drilling activity in the Gulf of Mexico, which would increase the amount of US crude reserves with continued demand. Analysts

NEW YORK—Bank of America Corp. reached a $2.8-billion settlement with Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac over claims that one of its businesses sold bad mortgages.

The settlement is the largest yet in resolving claims and the first to resolve the lawsuit with the mortgage lenders since the 2008 collapse of the housing market. Analysts and investors have been waiting to see how fast a deal Fannie and Freddie would strike with the mortgage lenders since the 2008 collapse of the housing market.

Fearless forecast: What's new for 2011

IN AUTOMOBILE industry parlance, totally anticipating a new vehicle is called full model change (FMC) while offering a few features is called minor change (MC). By looking into people in the industry over the last few months, I managed to come up with a fearless forecast of what new models will be introduced, what will be all-new (FMC) and extended (MC) in 2011.

Let's begin with premium vehicles. Sports car aficionados will be thrilled to know that this year, PCA Cars, the importer and distributor of Porsche and Audi, is bringing in the Porsche GT2 RS, 911 Carrera S, Cayman R, new Boxster S, which has A7 Sportback, Audi R8, A3 Sportback and 1.8 TFSI. New Audi City executive sales, Robert Caputo, Jr. is certainly mixing the bar of high performance cars in this country.

Mark Isang, president of Formula City Inc., the importer and distributor of Mercedes, Jaguar and Land Rover, stated that the 2011 G-Class and Mercedes G-Class, a 400-horsepower two-door road car with racing genes, is coming later. Also, the Range Rover Evoque and the diesel Jaguar XE which actually entered the market at year-end 2010.

Meanwhile, according to its president, Toyota Inc. will introduce the 2011 Lexus CT 200h hybrid compact hatchback next month and the 2011 (second generation) Lexus GX 460, a seven-passenger sport utility vehicle with a V8 engine producing 300 hp.

John King, president of GPH Motors Inc., the distributor of Mercedes-Benz, Chrysler, Dodge and Jeep, was noted that this year, the Mercedes C-Class 2-door sports coupe will be offered at P1.09 million, the Mercedes E-Class Cabriolet at P6.48 million and to top them off, the Mercedes SLK 63 AMG roadster super sports car will be in its element. The only FMC Asian car will be the Jeep Grand Cherokee.

There was no reply from Asian Automobile, the BMW's

2011 Porsche Cayman R

2011 Toyota Lexus CT 200h hybrid compact hatchback importer, during the news that they are looking at bringing in the 2011 FMC Asian V8 sports car.

Willy Lee Yin, the president of MNC Group Importers, Ltd. of British Automobiles Inc., informed me that the 1.8-liter Cosworth, MNC's first first-hand FWD crossover, will be their new offering this year. The MNC is a premium price car with a premium price.

Not considered premium but just as pretty and hot are full-size cars. The 2011 concept of the Subaru Impreza was displayed at the 2010 Los Angeles Auto Show. While Marko, GM of Motor Sales, Philippine Inc., importer of the Subaru brand, said that the FMC 2011 Impreza based on that concept will be offered in Manila before the year ends.

Among the more affordable brands, Asian Road Toyota Motor Philippines opted to create a sub-brand, Toyota Yaris, which is well with Toyota because it is a Toyota's premium badge, noted me that the February 2011 and Asian pickup will undergo a big MC this year. Perennial for more details, be informed that "Burm is a new car, new features, but price?"

Fancy but Mitsubishi is also planning MC for the Montero Sport, the firm's mid-size SUV and the Strada, the firm's compact minivan. Meanwhile, Mercedes Philippines marketing vice president, Stephen Tan, said that this year, they will upgrade their low-end models. Like the Mercedes 1,800 cc will get more MC and the Strada. The compact mid-size segment of all automatic transmission models will be upgraded with VCT (variable valve timing) and a new multimedia/information system with navigation system, GPS, and more.

Meanwhile, as of deadline this news was on 2011 FMC or MC car launch info from Universal Motors Corp., Asian Philippines Corp. and Suzuki Philippines Inc. Meanwhile, there are several exciting new announcements in the line of the MNC (Mitsubishi) a golden era for an enthusiast.

Colombian Automar Corp., which distributes the vehicles, will start selling the Suzuki Swift and Swift, all of which, announced FMC, per senior marketing manager Roberto Garcia Jr. VVP M & L, on the other hand, noted me that they will have no new models this year.

Maggie's way with glass and geometry

In the Forbes architecture & design list, architect Ernesto Bosschi Jr. handles the interior design and the space design, while Go takes care of the interiors. "I think, he makes the floor plan, I style it," says Go, who wears around a size in six-inch heels with black flat shoes.

The 1,200-sq-ft house, owned by a lawyer, is one of his favorite locations of the projects open. It had undergone several renovations.

Now 1,400 sq ft, the house has an entrance, a garage and a pool house. The wide expanse of glass enhances the cool, minimalist and minimalist style. The fourth renovation aims to create more atmosphere and to make the structure stand by concrete floors and walls.

Open to views

Bosschi explains: "With all the glass, we wanted the whole house to be viewed from anywhere. Members of the family will see each other when they are standing near each other. The spaces are flexible. They change in size when you open the sliding doors, making them ideal for parties."

"The landscape was also when we moved the ceiling in the living room and the house. We had to extend the floor in the house. It's Maggie's favorite feature. You can hang out and look out into the garden," he explains.

There are distinctive architectural features, such as the suspended ceiling suggestive of a Japanese house, a floating staircase wall, and a concrete floor design.

The house, designed by Go, is a play of materials, colors, textures and volumes. The floating horizontal staircase wall provides privacy and screens the dining area from the kitchen. A narrow horizontal slit allows natural light in, and gives the owner a view of the perfect garden lined with bamboo poles. A sliding wall hangs between the glass steps and the main door located in the main house.

The other side is an open wall made from sliding glass doors.

Below another side, a vertical staircase wall with wooden panels also defines the living room.

Play of marble

Bosschi points out that Go has a keen eye, marked by a sharp sense of volume, a subtle but powerful control of color, and an elegant grasp of form and line. "She controls the colors, the textures and textures, and decides where they go. She knows the materials, such as using darker wood for the dining room and polished Italian Carrara marble. We used wood from the Philippines and natural stone, except in the entrance, where we used agglomerate (Eagle limestone)," says Bosschi.

The house makes use of a variety of such materials as marble, wood, glass and stone. After a long time, the granite floor was replaced by a new one. The granite floor was replaced by a new one. The granite floor was replaced by a new one.

The rest of the house is made of the same materials as the dining room. The granite floor was replaced by a new one. The granite floor was replaced by a new one.

"People are afraid of marble. They think it's heavy, it's the way you put it together. It's not a heavy stone," says Bosschi. "In the living room, the granite floor was replaced by a new one. The granite floor was replaced by a new one."

SPRING geometric shapes and bold colors characterize the design plan in the living room.

ARCHITECT Ernesto Bosschi Jr. and Go in a living room in the minimalist house. "It's an open space with living room, dining room and kitchen," says Go.

Bosschi adds: "Maggie knows quality. She immediately put the right things in the house. She's a very good person. The second-colored living room is the best. It's a very good person. The second-colored living room is the best. It's a very good person."

Elegant dressing room

In the formal dining room, a black Italian chandelier is also an aesthetic choice, since the two-color floor is a mix of light and dark colors. The room is covered in a modern and elegant atmosphere, giving a modern but not too modern and glass finish.

'Mommy resolutions' for 2011

Sleep early, teach kids to say 'please,' make the most of playtime—and will leave some 'me' time for mommy to recharge

IT'S ALWAYS been my practice to come up with a list of resolutions for the new year, but this year, considering that my life really isn't all roses anymore, I thought it would be more fitting to come up with a mommy list of resolutions. Whether I make it all the way to December or not remains to be seen, but the all resolutions they're worth a try!

1. Sleeping at the right time.—I haven't slept, my daughter sleeps a full two-hour time to sleep that an infant to two-year-old who doesn't get from the time with all her singing and dancing. This year, though, the clock will be the boss. I recently found a book which suggested using a timer as a natural source of authority. It said to try telling the child that an activity should be done now or, it will be the end of playtime, and the bedtime will begin. The end result was a solid timer or hour glass, so that the child will have a more concrete understanding of how much time he or she has.

2. Eating healthy.—This has actually been on my personal New Year's resolutions list for the last, oh, I don't know, 10 years, maybe! And now, it is spilling over to my parenting resolutions list. I can imagine this to be the same problem for many mothers out there. We can do this—and for ourselves,

Audrey Tan

Write us your story
@mommyspeak
@mommyspeak.com.sg

then for the sake of our kids. Let's face it, then from a life of depression and diabetes by putting them on the right track as early as possible.

3. Exercise—nowadays, mothers and teenagers want to be fit—well, except for me, but this is certainly no excuse not to get the kids active. Sometimes it's sports, walks in the park, camp, dance classes, or bike trips. The year will see an active family!

4. Learning.—I've been very privileged to be surrounded by people who value the importance of giving kids to society's best formation. Beginning with my twins, and on to my husband, and in the last few years, our daughter who has become wonderful friends in a kindergarten that cares to children. I'm constantly inspired. I believe it's never too early to expose our children to the realities of life, at age appropriate levels, and to teach them to be responsible to do good for others.

5. Optimism.—Sometimes I like this position especially for grandkids. There are children's favorite places. Optimism is the perfect time to create memories of joy and friendship that will last a lifetime. This year, I hope our life is a single opportunity for play time with my kids, please be.

6. Staying positive.—It's just life, or with the advent of digital cameras, have printed photographs become passé? Well, guess or not, I will finally fill up those frames and albums with photos we can actually laugh, imagine, and physical enjoy!

7. Gratitude and courtesy.—My daughter is now two-and-a-half years old. She's fast up growing that age where grunting, whether a knee or more, will be reported, and instead of having just spoken up to being shy will no longer be accepted by me and kids. With that as the motto, words "Please" and "Thank you" while I'm proud to say that she's been very good with her "Please" especially when she's in trouble, the show of appreciation is looking forward to a big "YES" we have no one improve things in the next 12 months!

8. Creative recreation.—It is so convenient to spend the weekend in the mall with the kids. We can find everything there. We can choose from among restaurants, snacks, stores, toy stores, movie theaters, and buy our own even have lunch in the playground. But the year, why don't we take a stand against the mall culture and find other ways to entertain the kids? Zoo, parks, reading and looking at books, backyards, family favorite movies—the list could go on. If we take time and make a real effort to get creative as a family.

9. 'Me' time.—I don't know if we can consider this part of a Mommy resolutions list, but find the giving moments for the little "me time" without feeling guilty is a great way for them to recharge and be reborn. I feel a lot more patient and appreciate my kids more when I get back home after having stepped out even for just an hour to go to an exercise class or get a haircut.

10. Fulfilling other roles.—While we're on the subject of taking time for me, I think it's also important to remember the other people in our lives—our husbands, parents, family and friends. It's vital for our kids to see us maintaining healthy and happy relationships with those people, so it gives them examples they can emulate later on, where they can develop relationships of their own. Growing up in this kind of environment will help them make their own and more individuals.

Of course, there are many other things that could be considered or included in my list, my year, but I'd like to maintain my sanity, too, while raising my kids. And so, let's fill those glasses—or pour kids with love, if that's what you have in hand—and toast to 2011 and the wonderful memories and moments it brought us, as we welcome 2011 and the exciting possibilities and adventures that lie ahead!
